b. OHRA Program Update Presentation

Dennis Slattery from OHRA's board of directors explained the services OHRA provided. Cassie Sinclair, the executive director of OHRA, provided a presentation (see attached):

- OHRA Helping low-income neighbors' live better lives - Our Vision, Our Mission
- The OHRA Center: A Community Asset
- OHRA's Three Programs
- Resource Navigation Assistance is Broad
- OHRA's Resource Center
- OHRA's Shelter
- OHRA's Shower Trailer
- OHRA's Housing Outcomes

Mr. Lessard addressed privacy screening. They were considering plants or a lattice fence. Concern was expressed regarding the two-story house across from the shelter and their privacy. There was a request not to place facilities in that area.

There was a suggestion to involve the unhoused as the shelter moved forward.

Ms. Sinclair explained OHRA would have two navigators onsite for the emergency shelter. Mr. Lessard clarified the emergency order shelter would be in one part of the building and the severe weather shelter would be run in another section of the building. Due to building and fire code issues, the severe weather shelter could not be run after the emergency order shelter ended. The building needed alterations for the severe weather shelter to run long term. Additionally, the fire safety plan had not been approved but is currently under review.

Mr. Slattery did not think OHRA was attracting more homeless people to that area. Homelessness has increased over the last years. OHRA was treating more people but there were many who did not want help. There was a need for increased enforcement in the that area. It would require a multi layered approach.

Ms. Sinclair clarified OHRA had experience running shelters and would provide the same services OHRA provided at their building. There would be a 24-7 fire watch as well as background checks. Mr. Slattery added they needed continued support from several areas to be sustainable and effective for the long term.

Ms. Sinclair explained there would be guests at the low barrier shelter with substance use disorders and they would sign an agreement not to use while on the property. If they must evict someone, OHRA would do everything they could to find a shelter elsewhere. If someone is not abiding by the rules, they might get evicted. Police Chief Tighe O'Meara added they could offer the dusk to dawn campsite, other services, contact a social service provider, even drive them to Medford. If the police department participated in the removal of a guest at 2200 Ashland or OHRA, they would try to find something to do with that person. If that person did not want to go anywhere, there was not much the police could do other than monitor them.

Mr. Lessard explained there was funding for the shelter through Jan 10, 2024. This was the best the city could do. For 71 days, thirty individuals will have an opportunity to get past their barriers. After that it will be severe weather operations only unless there are additional funds to extend. The fire code will prevent the city from operating the emergency order shelter ended. Housing Program Manager Linda Reid added that through the emergency order, the Multi Coordination Group was established and looking at future legislation. Alternately, the Jackson County Continuum of Care was advocating for more rapid rehousing funding.

Mr. Lessard addressed a question on what happened outside the shelter and how will the city respond. It would fall to enforcement. He went on to explain the city did not have the resources to reach out to other providers. In the past, faith-based organizations volunteered to run shelters but there had been a dramatic decline in volunteering, and it fell to the city.

Ms. Reid addressed potential congregate issues. There were discussions about using the garage space as a waiting area for the shower. OHRA was a seasoned shelter provider and when they ran the other shelter, there were no congregate issues.

Mr. Slattery suggested a postmortem after January 10, 2024, with all the stakeholders. He noted that section of town had always been a place where people camped and was a challenge. The people who come to OHRA did not run around the streets. The sense that crime has increased since OHRA started may be statistically true, but homelessness has increased dramatically. The number of homeless had doubled despite OHRA's best efforts.

c. Public Input

Janet Bell/Ashland/Noted the fencing needed to be improved and there was a path that needed consideration. Shop N Kart and Albertsons had hired security. She wanted to know where people staying at the shelter would do during the day.

Vincent Rice/Ashland/Spoke in support of the shelter and addressed the humanity of the homeless. If there was not enough money for the shelter, the city could cut staff salaries.

Council clarified that the funds for the shelter came from grants. The emergency order shelter was different from the severe weather shelter. People staying at the emergency order shelter would remain indoors during the day and not spill out into the neighborhood. The severe weather shelter was open at night and typically drew smaller numbers of people.

Tina Sanford/Ashland/Owns the DMV building. She was glad the focus was on homes but appreciated that someone brought up what businesses had been experiencing. She was not there to condemn OHRA but to protect her property. She explained they had called repeatedly about the transient who had started the Oak Knoll fire and did not feel heard. There needed to be better ordinances and laws. Businesses needed resources they could rely on.

Debbie Neisewander/Ashland/Wanted to know if OHRA was taking applications and thought Ashland should take priority over other areas. She also wanted to know if there would be a bus to take people from the severe weather shelter to the library during the day.

Ms. Sinclair explained OHRA served Jackson County. OHRA conducted vulnerability screenings on people who came to them. OHRA was not marketing services throughout the valley.

d. City Council Discussion

Council directed staff to work on the following:

- The city manager and police chief develop a list of ordinances to help enforcement.
- Establish a framework for responsiveness, include garbage, fire, police, etc.
- Have some form of outreach, a community development plan, to help the businesses in southeast Ashland.
- Work with Siskiyou school on fencing the easement.
- Work with stakeholders on a concept for a long-term program and bring it to the neighborhood. Have the Housing and Human Services Committee research what might be possible on the building site.

- Work with the neighborhood to determine the best layout for facilities at the shelter so it is not problematic for the neighbors.

3. Adjournment of Study Session
